

Miss Bridgman's Rockin' Review September 30, 2016

[ACADEMICS]

In academics this week we have continued with our EL and Math curriculum. Both subjects are going smoothly and we are making great progress. This week there has been a major focus on EL as we began a new novel. The students are enjoying the reading and so am I! I have updated my website to include a few new resources for EL and Eureka Math so please take a minute and check it out ☺

Also this week in academics we held a "trial of Christopher Columbus". The students did a phenomenal job preparing and sharing their arguments and even got a little taste of what being in a real court room might be like.

[THE WEEK AHEAD]

The week ahead will be a short week. The students have no school Friday and Monday and I am sure they are ready for the break!

Last week we began our book talks and our Maddie did an excellent job! I cannot wait to see what else the students come up with!

Next week students can expect to continue to learn about the early American colonies and what life was like back then. Students should also expect to keep reading about a chapter each night from Esperanza Rising. Finally, next Monday we should be ready to take the mid-module assessment in math over our first 8 lessons.

Thanks for reading!

Have a great weekend
everyone!

Students begin reading a new EL book titled "Esperanza Rising"

Dear Room 16 Families,

Week 6 has ended and there is so much going on in room 16! This week we have seen some amazing growth with students in reading and math. Each day students face challenges and continue to handle them with determination and perseverance. As the weather changes and fall begins to creep in please be sure to remind students the importance of hand washing and other hygiene. Flu season will soon be upon us!
